INDEPENDENT.

A DISSERTATION ON PAIN.

BY SUE CHESINGTWOOD.

Pain was born of sin. So orthodoxy teaches. The hypothesis is reasonable since it is a fit progeny of such parentage. Revelation presents it in a story so simple and unpretending, that the erudite scoff at it, and the humbler sort esteem it allegorical. Mankind is naturally skeptical; faith is not innate; we accept no fact because it is simply stated, but say with Hume, "a wise man proportions his belief to his evidence." Thus half the world are standing on tip toe and straining their eyes to see over the mountains, and because they cannot see, assert that there is nothing on the other side.

When we are told that pain comes from an act of disobedience, we sneer at the assertion, call it an exploded idea, a thing effete and behind the age and forthwith indulge in philosophical speculations as to its origin, and analytically dissect its constituency. When all is done, what have we but the fact that is a sensation, whether of brain heart, and quite immaterial? One thing we know, whatever sensation is in the scale of our momentary experience, pain is always in the counterbalance and inevitably outweighs. It is the first expression on the infant's face. Every one who enters this world does it as under protest, with the corners of his mouth drawn pitfully down, as if, in the first wail, he rehearsed the words of the great, sad Dante, 'Who comes here leaves hope behind.'

Pain, moral, montal, physical, rules the world. It is the pivot on which turns every life. The passions of the human heart make the sum of each individual life. The names of such passions, as anger, jealousy, hate, fear, are synonyms with pain. Even love in its highest state is accompanied by reblind, groping yearning; and that word yearning fairly pulses with heartthrobs. It is a worship always blended with uncertainty and fear; and the truest Christian life is made up more of prayer than praise. Natural love, in its most perfect state—that of the mother for her babe—is another illustration. The quick kisses showered on the little cooing mouth are but the offspring of an unbreathed sigh; a sort of compensation, paid in advance, for the sorrows she knews must touch its life. And the love of the human artian, taking in all mankind, is ripe with anguish at the suffering of the great world. And even the love between man and woman, a love that has come down through the ages, since the first man woed the first woman, expresses a lack; and he who lacks, suffers.

Voltaire has tersely put it thus, 'In a word, every desire is a want, a necessary, a beginning of pain. Pain, therefore, is the mainspring of all the actions of animated beings.' Thus the great skeptic makes pain a cause. Orthodoxy styles it an effect; yet desire preceded the act of disobedience, and desire is pain. But the very desire was an act of disobedience So cause and effect were twin born.

Once we heard one say—whose life had been a sort of moral and mental torture—that 'every moment some one was crucified.' Were our eyes spiritually opened we doubt not we should see many about us, with bleeding palms, and the air would be fairly rent with the cries, 'Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani.'

The skeleton in the closet has become a proverb; and what is its meaning but a Golgatha in every experience. 'Take your cross and follow me,' was the command of him who at Calvary said 'It is finished.' Even happiness, in its most exquisite realization, trenches on pain; and we cry for joy as well as for sorrow.

The finer the organization the greater the possibility of suffering Those who are born to crime and degradation, can, with a sort of dumb endurance, pass through what would prove fatal to a refined, sensitive nature. Our capacity for enjoyment, and our capacity for suffering balance each other and each is met. Pain both elevates and lowers. Iris like, it is double minded, and shouts both ways at once. It makes one man a philanthrophist, full of charity and sympathy for all the world: it makes another an ascetic, with his very life blood embittered.

We are told that beyond, in the mysterious hereafter, the two are for ever divided; joy and heaven, pain and hell. We thank God for the heaven, and entreat Him, for Christ's sake, that we may reach it; yet there is something utterly heart rending in the entire helplessness of death. The soul to the very last, blind and groping, takes it on trust. But there is something repellent in this orthodox heaven in its infinite selfishness, with its white robed saints, contemplating, with serene content, the agony of the damned. God, the All Father; does he see any soul which was created, not voluntarily, but by His will, thrust into torment and not feel pain? And Christ who died, and who as his head dropped upon his breast, and 'the great heart' broke, cried, 'Father, forgive them, they know not what they do?' Think you, this Christ sees any soul after the sorrow and sin of this little life, eternally cast out, and without sorrow? A heaven utterly exempt from pain can be conceived of only by the annihilation of hell.—Golden Age.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

Another congenial field of labor for women is thus indicated by the Goden Age.

There are hundreds of young women among us with gifts as great and a spirit as noble as that of Miss Jones, who like her would devote their talents to the service of man, which is the service of God. Like her they want a life work. They have no sympathy with any church party, and can not join either a Protestant or a Catholic sisterhood. They have home ties and duties to perform. But these do not completely absorb nor satisfy them. They long to feel that they are ministering spirit in a world, of suffering, and wrong. And for these, among other important offices and occupations, is the care of the sick, for which women have the finest aptitude, often amounting to real genius.

Every year it becomes more evident that the nurse is quite as important as the physician, and that the proper care of the sick is an essential condition of their cure. Women are fast conquering the prejudice which environs the medical profession, and finding within it a fitting and congenial field. It remains for them to make nursing an honorable and remunerative profession by lifting it up to its true place as an art which requires skill and training to master and patience to properly execute, and as a service to man which the spirit of piety and duty will invest with all the sanctions and satisfactions of religion.

SUPERVISION OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In all business enterprises, supervision is acknowledged to do an essential condition of success.

Many of our country schools are badly managed, much of our educational fund is squandered or fails to be productive of good results, because there is no supervisory head in each county, to see that school work of all kinds is well done. Though local directors are required by law to visit the schools in their sub district twice each term, that duty is rarely performed.

In the school room, as in workshop, on the farm, or in the business house, supervision is a motor of wondrous power. There being no one in each county to organize counsel and direct, our country schools are frequently a chaos of misapplied good purposes, wasteways of unused or misdirected energies. While our cities and towns have been making rapid progress in all that concerns education, our rural districts have failed to keep pace with them, and in some localities have actually retrograded.

Is it wise to entrust the vital interests of education to teachers almost as immature in years and judgment as their pupils, without providing some means whereby their efforts may be aided, tested controlled and encouraged? Can we reasonably expect to derive much real benefit from agencies so feeble, employed in a manner which would be ruinous or disastrous in any business enterprise? The truth is, many of the complaints made against our common schools for their lack of efficiency and thoroughness, are but protests against our inefficient system of common schools.—Hon. T. W. Harvey, in Ohio Educational Monthly.

A FAITHFUL SHEPHERD BOY.

Gerhardt was a German shepherd boy and a noble fellow he was, although he was very poor.

One day while he was watching his flock which was feeding in a valley on the borders of a forest, a hunter came out of the woods and asked,

'How far is it to the nearest village?'

'Six miles, sir,' replied the boy, 'but the road is only a sheep track, and very easily missed.'

The hunter looked at the crooked track and said:

'My lad, I am hungry, tired and thirsty, I have lost my companions, and missed my way. Leave your sheep and show me the road. I will pay you well.'

'I cannot leave my sheep, sir,' rejoined Gerhardt. They would stray into the forest, and be eaten by wolves, or stolen by robbers.'

'Well, what of that?' queried the hunter. 'They are not your sheep. The loss of one or more would'nt be much for your master, and I will give you more than you have earned in a whole year.'

'I cannot go, sir,' rejoined Gerhardt, very firmly. 'My master pays me for my time; and he trusts me with his sheep. If I were to sell my time which does not belong to me, and the sheep should get lost, it would be the same as if I stole them.'

'Well,' said the hunter, 'will you trust your sheep with me while you go to the village and get some food and drink, and a guide? I will take care of them for you.'

The boy shook his head. 'The sheep do not know your voice, and—'

'And what? Can't you trust me? Do I look like a dishonest man?' asked the hunter

'Sir,' said the boy, 'you tried to make me false to my trust, and wanted me to break my word to master. How do I know you would keep your word to me?'

The hunter laughed, and he felt the boy had firmly cornered him. He said: 'I see, my lad, that you are a good faithful boy. I will not forget you. Show me the road and I will try and make it out myself.

Gerhardt now offered the contents of his scrip to the hungry man, who, coarse as it was, ate it gladly. Presently his attendants came up, and then Gerhardt, to his surprise, found that the hunter was the Grand Duke, who owned all the country round. The Duke was so pleased with the boy's honesty that he sent for him shortly after, and had him educated.—Young Pilgrim.

PROSPECTS FOR THE WOOL CLIP.

The limited supply of wool now in the country, we learn has led some manufacturers to discuss the propriety of stopping their mills for a few months. We think, however, there is little prospect for such a course being adopted, and that the small amount of wool now in the country will continue to be sought for at prices averaging with the highest offered up to this time. The further fact to which we have called the attention so often in these columns, that for several years the supply of domestic fleece was diminishing, seems to be appreciated among manufacturers, and as a consequence, we have intimations of liberal offers for the clip of 1872. These prices are fully up to the offerings of the past three months, and show that the shrewdest buyers don't expect wool to be any lower during the year. The New York Economist, a paper never yet known to show partiality to the wool grower, in a late issue says that a large portion of the coming Ohio and Michigan clip is contracted for at from 65 to 75 cents per pound, and that transactions, even at these figures, were at a stand still, for the reason that the farmers want 80 cents and look for 90 cents if not one dollar, per pound. We would advise growers not to contract their wool at anything less than a very high price, yet awhile. Keep it growing, and have it long and strong. Shear in good season and put up in No. 1, good condition, and when they have it ready post themselves as to the market, and sell when they can get the top price for wool of the class and condition in which theirs will grade. Under some conditions, it will pay to hold for a higher market than that ranging at the time of shearing; but few farmers have the facilities for storing wool that it will not lose in weight and sightliness by being held past the marketing season. Without taking this shrinkage into account, with most farmers the money in hand at shearing time can be made to earn more than could be realized by any probable advance in prices.—Western Rural

THE GOSPEL OF THEOLOGY

We have not the vanity to attempt an analysis of the human soul. The subject is too vast, too complicated, too deep, too subtle for our feeble powers. It is our settled conviction that none but its great eternal author can fathom its intricate susceptibilities, or determine its ultimate possibilities. Men, in their ignorance, stimulated as they sometimes are by egotism and self conceit, or infatuated by some theological myths may deal out, without stint, their anathemas and judgment against their fellow men; they may vilify and slander the human soul by charging it with innate vileness, corruption, and total depravity; but we are intuitively drawn back to that great self evident and beautiful truth, as written by a Divine inspiration upon our own consciousness—that man is inherently divine; that the germ of life, the ever living soul of man, is an emanation from the parental and maternal soul or life of the universe, whom we call God, and is, therefore, immortal, possessing the germs of future greatness and goodness, the embryo elements of celestial love, purity, and beauty. This conviction firmly rooted in our minds, has a tendency to shed a radiant light of divinest charity and paternal love over our pathway of life; and we look upon all races and classes of men as our equals in the sight, and in the parental affections of our common fatner, God. Moreover, it affirms with an irresistable logic the divinity of a universal democracy.

It is not our design in this present writing to deal with abstruse or technical questions of any kind. We wish to confine our thoughts within the sphere of our every day life, its observations and individual experiences, for it is from thence that we learn that the human soul is most delicately constructed; that it is a marvelous production, the masterpiece of the universe, which only needs culture, development, refinement, and maturity in its several departments, to round it out and fashion it into an embodiment of angelic beauty. It is emphatically the harp of a thousand strings that only needs to be attuned that it may respond in harmonious accord to the music of celestial spheres.

The practical thinking man will comprehend at once why it is that his fellow men occupy his present position, for he sees at once the crushing circumstances that surround them. Bad physiological conditions, hereditary transmissions, debasing habits, false political, religious, and social institutions, the products of ignorance, are the prolific sources from whence it comes, like a brood of hissing serpents, or a legion of demons, bringing war, pestilence and famine in their train.

But we have no time now for such discussion We have this much to say in conclusion, and we say it with all confidence, and to those that need not look for the millenial era to dawn upon their earthly pilgrimage. We say take courage, hope on, have faith in God and the future, O! thou bewildered, struggling soul! for out of all this apparent discord, confusion and strife shall come a rich and priceless reward The world is God's great workshop, or laboratory, for producing results that your poor, oppressed, and weary minds have never yet dreamed of The lily springs from the muddy sea pool, a thing of beauty, an emblem of purity. Wait, then, and work with patience, until the great problems of human life and human destiny are solved; and then we shall view the Mount of Transfiguration in the rosy light of the summer land, and as Jesus, and Peter, and James, and John the beloved disciple, had their spiritual vision opened to the priceless beauties of a glorified existence beyond this, so shalt thou arise from the weary night of toil and suffering, a jewel of purity, love, and celestial beauty, to dwell with the angels evermore.—Spiritual Republic.

A NEW TELEGRAPH SYSTEM.

Where improvements are needed, and advancements are permitted, the men of this age are not slow to seize an opportunity. The last recorded improvement in the resources of business is the invention of an automatic system which it is claimed will make a complete revolution of the telegraph business of the country. The present cost of telegraphing ten words from Toledo to New York is $1, and messages to other points are sent at a proportionate expense. The working capacity of a wire in good condition averages six hundred words an hour. The system referred to which is soon to be put into active operation from New York to Washington, will enable the operator to send 60,000 words over a single wire in an hour, at one fiftieth of the cost.

The new plan stated in a few words is as follows: The telegraph company will prepare and sell at a trifling expense, a small machine, by which the intended message, instead of being written out, can be stamped in the telegraphic characters, on a strip of paper. The act of making out the dispatch in this form can be mastered in a few hours. The dispatch thus made out is taken to the telegraph office, and is transmitted to the office at the other end of the line at the rate of 1,500 words per minute. The dispatch, on its receipt, is placed upon another machine, which prints it in plain printed Roman characters, at the rate of 3,000 words for an hour. The dispatch is then delivered to the person to whom it is directed, in printed form. This process will render the sending of short messages out of the question, and none will be taken in this manner of less than one hundred words, the charge for which will be twenty cents.

The advantage of the system is economy of time and money, both to the owner and the user of the wire. The business men of the country will do their correspondence in this way, at an incalculable reduction of expense and trouble, while the working cost of the line will be lessened in a comparative degree, for under the new plan each wire and operator can perform the service of one hundred lines and one hundred operators on the present system.—Toledo Commercial.

MANUFACTORY OF STAINED GLASS, MUNICH.

It is difficult to assign any sufficient reason why the art of making beautiful windows should decline; yet, certainly, it is impossible to compare the medieval glass pictures with the modern without feeling that the latter are inferior. The modern glass staining was carried to its greatest perfection by the late Max Emanuel Ainmuller, who died in December, 1870. After the fall of Lola Montez from power, the whole superintendence of the works, in which he had long been a principal artist, fell into his hands; and it is to him that the undoubtedly beautiful glass illuminating the cathedral and other churches at Munich, Colngne and Regensburg is to be credited. His best work is to be seen in England—the 'Opening of Parliament by James II,' made for St Paul's in London, after a painting of Kaulbach's being particularly fine. His works in Cambridge University church, in Glasgow Cathedral, and Parliament House (Edinburgh) are admirable. Yet, in looking upon all these, one sees faults that are not his, but those of his century—that is, the attempt is to make art more realistic than it can be, especially on glass. On this transparent surface efforts at a perfect perspective at once revealed their impossibility. The more you put deep shades, to make forms look solid, the more do you block up and cumber a medium whose first object is to be as transparent as is consistent with any medium at all. If stained glass is ever to recover its original beauty, it must be by pretending to be no more than the merest surface of colored spots. It must be simply decorative, like the flowers on a bowl. It must not attempt to picture solid and substantial men and women perched in a window where they would be quite unable to climb. Several of Ainmuller's best windows seem to have been animated by a tendency in this direction, and are proportionately finer than others. This is especially so in the Glasgow works. For the rest, it must be admitted that, so far as his colors are concerned, they have never been surpassed in purity or intensity. He has well deserved that statue, eleven feet high, made by professor Halbig for his grave in the Campo Santo. They who sit in the light of so many brilliant windows little know, perhaps how much labor goes to the making of them. They are first designed, then stained in bits; their colors are burned in separately—first the blue than the red—and each requires three successive beatings in the oven. They must then be pieced into a whole, with leadings connecting the pieces, then swung in a large window frame to be examined. If any defect be discovered, the part or parts must be burned again in an oven, and then the whole must be burned together. The scene in the Glasmalerei is remarkable enough. Here is a man engaged upon a martyr's toes, while in another room the eyes of the same saint cast upon you their last look of despair as they are shoved into a furnace heated sevenfold—just as if Herr Forthier, who now presides, I believe, were another Diocletian. A week later you will see the martyr, purified by his ordeal, smiling down a whole rainbow upon the workmen, in their shirt sleeves, in an apartment full of chalk, old planks, coke and all manner of odds and ends. These fellows are no respecters of persons, either. Gods and saints, St. George's dragon, and the chamois destained for some nobleman's hunting box are cast together into the oven, and shine together along the walls.—From 'The City of the Little Monk,' by M. D. Conway, in Harper's Magazine for Apail.

CONTENTMENT.

A wealthy epicure applied to an Arabian doctor for a prescription that would restore his body to health and give happiness to his mind. The physician advised him to exchange shirts with a man who was perfectly contented with his lot; upon which the patient set out upon his journey in pursuit of such a person. After many months spent without accomplishing his object, he was told of a certain cobbler of whom every one had spoken as a model of contentment and happiness. Pursuing the direction given, the traveler was pleased with the sight of the cobbler enjoying a comfortable nap on a board. Without ceremony he was aroused from slumber, and the important interrogatory whether he was contented with his lot was answered in the affirmative.

'Then,' said the seeker after happiness, 'I have one small boon to ask at your hands. It is that you exchange shirts with me, that by this means I also may become contented and happy.'

'Most gladly would I accede to your request,' replied the cobbler, 'but—'

'Nay! refuse me not!' interrupted the man of wealth. 'Any sum thou mayest name shall be thine.'

'I seek not thy wealth,' said the cobbler; 'but—but—'

'But what?'

'The truth is—I have no shirt!'

CHINESE WOMEN.

The women of China are divided into two classes—the bound footed, who are the ladies, and the large footed, who are the common class. The latter carry the burdens, do all the drudging and out door work, while their husbands do nothing. When a little girl is born, the parents think the Gods are angry with them, and they hold a consultation as to whether she shall be allowed to live or not. If she is, when she arrives at the age of four years, they hold another consultation whether she shall be bound footed or a large footed woman. If she is chosen to be a bound footed, she is not permitted to do anything; but if otherwise, she has to be the family slave. Girls have no choice of their husbands, but are sold by the parents at the highest price they can obtain for them. She never sees her husband, nor he her, until after they are married. If he chooses he can be divorced from her for talking too much; if he gets poor he can sell her again.

It cannot be too deeply impressed upon the mind that application is the price to be paid for mental acquisition, and that it is as absurd to expect them without it as it is to hope for a harvest where we have not sown the seed.

Might does not make right, 'established facts' to the contrary notwithstanding.

'Those who buy tombstones of us look with pride and satisfaction on the graves of their friends,' is the affecting advertisement of a western stonecutter.

William, who used to boast that he never owed a dollar in his life and never would, in less than a year after his marriage had a little Bill to take up every day.

It was the saying of Socrates that every man had need of a faithful friend and a bitter enemy—the one to advise, the other to show his faults.

Two Dollars a year, in advance.

Massillon, Wednesday, April 10.

Strikes among the miners have again come to be the order of the day We are informed that the operators in the Mahoning Valley and at or near Letonia, struck for higher wages last week, asking one dollar instead of 80 cents a tun which they now receive. The proprietors have not acceded to their demand, so work in the banks has stopped. The miners here, also, have struck for one dollar instead of 80 cents a tun, the advance to commence after next pay day, which is on Saturday the 13th. We are informed that rather than the strike shall take place the proprietors have wisely agreed to accede to the demands of the miners. True, it is a heavy undertaking for these enterprising men; but the only way they can make themselves safe is to sell their coal at higher prices, which it is said, they are about to do. This policy, although it may seem an expensive one, is decidedly better than those disastrous strikes; for when hundreds and thousands of working men are out of employ community feels it all through. Though miners may be looked upon as capricious, whimsical, yet there must be some reason why they ask more wages, and this seems general. Prices of living are going up, and miners, as well as the rest of us, feel it, and this is probably the reason of the course which they have just adopted. Higher prices imply a want of more money, and that makes business more active. Iron is said to be considerably advanced in price, and certain classes of dry goods have an upward tendency. The staff of life, flour, too, is threatening to or has risen considerably. When these things are understood we need not wonder at the action of the miners They have to pay higher prices for living, so it is not unreasonable that must have increased wages. We may say they are improvident—and suppose this is the rule, they are not the people to hoard money,—they keep it moving—just what money is made for—and if prices are higher the money circulates more freely, so that all, more or less, can realize the benefits of this activity.

Is it Consistent?—Not a few of our republican brethren have much fault to find with those earnest temperance men who have arrived at that point, practically and politically, to make the liquor question an issue at the polls. It is all wrong, they tell us, and try to show that the result will prove disastrous to the cause to temperance. Much of the politics some of them inculcate, we all see, is entirely incompatible with temperance, and perhaps this is the reason why they wish to keep this reform out of politics If so they may be consistent just that far; but it is very clear that politics should be elevated so as not to be inconsistent with correct morals. For years the brewers and distillers have been holding their state and national conventions, and in these meetings they have again and again passed resolutions that they will vote for no temperance fanatics. This course they commenced before ever the prohibition party was organized, and have been carrying out their resolves, as far as they could ever since. But we see no complaint about these things in those political papers which have so much fault to find with temperance men because they refuse to vote for liquor makers, dealers and drinkers This is certainly inconsistent. But the temperance movement won't stop for such opposition. Much as temperance men were opposed in local politics, we notice that several prohibitionists were elected on the first inst.

Prof Morse, the distinguished discoverer and inventor of the present telegraph system, died on the 2 1 inst, at his residence in New York, at the advanced age of 81 years. His death has elicited very extended notices in the leading journals, of the life and services of this great man. In 1835 he made the first instrument, the hint for which he received, we may say, by accident. Like almost all other discoverers and inventors his fortune was hard for several years. In presenting his invention to congress sometime in 1843, for the purpose of attaining a little aid, that body, or at least a larger portion of it, treated the matter as a joke or a trick, trying to turn the whole thing into ridicule. But a few sensible men stock by Mr. M, among who was a Mr. Mason, of Ohio. These friends acquired strength, and as the result of their efforts they secured an appropriation of some $30,000. This was to test the theory. It was soon satisfactorily established, and the first line built extended from Washington to Baltimore. The working of this line settled the question Congress ceased to burlesque the invention as a visionary thing. Before two years we had lines in Ohio. At present the telegraph penetrates almost every community in the land, and it is one of the indispensable agencies in communicating thought. Not only is our country made one by this power, but the world is a unit for the wires now reach to the ends of the earth. Mr. Morse was a benefactor of the race.

Connecticut has followed New Hampshire, and elected the republican ticket. The governor (Jewell) was re elected by a plurality of nearly 2,000 over Hubbard, the democratic candidate. The prohibition and labor reform candidates, however received something over 1900 votes, so that Jewell's actual majority is reported at from 80 to 100. The prohibition ticket received over 1,800, a decided increase over last year's vote. Both houses have decided republican majorities.

And Rhode Island has gone the same way that New Hampshire and Connecticut did—so the prospects of the democracy are rather unpromising.

Samuel Galloway, one of Ohio's leading statesmen, died at an advance age on the 5th inst, Mr. G. held many responsible public positions, and always acquitted himself with credit, ability and integrity. He was a plain, unostentatious man, and aimed to be practical. During the life of the party he was a whig, as we remember it, and being one of this class of politicians was, in some respects, a conservative man. But when the republican party took shape he was an active member of the party, and continued so even to the last year of his life.

Many politicians seem to be worrying themselves, while others are making any number of speculations as to the coming reform national convention which is to take place, at Cincinnati, on the 6th of May. This may all be wise and well, but perhaps it would be as discreet to let the convention speak for itself. Some among the leading men of the nation are expected to be present, and if they do as foolish things as some prophesy they will disappoint their best friends. There is no occasion to be in hurry in anticipating the action of that body, and many of those who are disposed to criticise it beforehand may be mistaken in the result. If its members act foolishly it will come home to them as a failure.

THE NEW HOMESTEAD BILL.

The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune writes under date of March 27 as follows:

The inquiries regarding the exact terms of Soldiers' Homestead bill are numerous from all quarters. As it goes to the president for his signature, it provides that every officer or soldier, seaman or marine, who served during the rebellion and was honorably discharged, shall on compliance with the homestead act, receive a patent for 160 acres of public land—not mineral—including the alternate reserved sections of public lands along the line of any railroad or public work; provided that said homestead settler shall be allowed six months after locating his settlement and improvement; and provided, also, that the time which the homestead settler shall have served in the army, navy or marine corps, aforesaid, shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect title, or if discharged on account of wounds received, or disability incurred in the line of duty then the term of enlistment shall be deducted from the time heretofore required to perfect title without reference to the length of time he may have served provided, however, that no patent shall issue to any homestead settler who has not resided upon, improved and cultivated his said homestead for a period of at least one year after he shall commence his improvements as aforesaid. Any one entitled to enter under this act, and who has heretofore entered less than 160 acres under the homestead act, may enter enough under the present act to make 160 in all If any person entitled to the provisions of this act has died, his widow, if unmarried, or in case of her death or marriage, then his minor orphan children, by guardian duly appointed, shall be entitled to all the benefits of the act. If any previous entry under the homestead has lapsed by reason of absence of the pre emptor in the army or navy, the entry shall be restored. Any soldier, sailor, marine, officer, or other person coming within the provision of this act may as well by an agent as in person enter upon said homestead, provided that said claimant in person, shall within the time prescribed commence settlement and improvements on the same and thereafter fulfill all requirements of this act. The Commissioner of the General Land Office is to make all needful rules to carry the act into effect.

Up to the present time petitions in favor of changing Ohio laws in behalf of liquor gave in 74,491 names—our side hands in 94,459 names, nearly 20,000 ahead for the right.

A large variety of staple and fancy dry goods, carpets, &c., have just been received at Ricks', to which they invite the attention of all persons who wish to purchase, the prices will always be at the lowest market rates.

Hon. T. W. Harvey, commissioner of common schools for Ohio, has sent us the 18th annual report. He states that the schools during the past year have enjoyed a marked degree of prosperity, and the number of pupils larger than usual—income for school support increased—many new buildings erected—teachers institutes well attended, and methods of imparting instruction improved. The present school law was enacted in 1853, at that time a great improvement on the preceding system, but Mr. Harvey is decidedly in favor of making further progress, as other states are far in advance of Ohio in their school laws. This state was among the first to lead off in this direction, and it should not now lag in the work of education. It is a proud eminence to occupy to be in the van of progress in the work of education; and as our state once enjoyed that distinction it should boldly take other needed steps in order to be up with the times. Conservatism in this work is as bad or even worse than it is in politics, and should be abjured as fatal to a healthy advancement in leading the minds of youth to higher aims and more exalted positions. The number of children of both sexes of proper age for attending school, in 1871 was 1 045.166; 13,402 of whom are colored. 502 school houses were built during the year 81 less than in 1870. Number of lady teachers 3,008—gentlemen, 934. Average monthly wages of ladies $21,—gentlemen, $37. Ohio ought to be ashamed of that, paying women for doing the same work that men perform a little more than half wages. That disgraceful statute of 1861 which tends to keep colored children out of school, unless there are enough to form a separate school, still exists, but Mr. Harvey suggests its repeal, and that no distinction be made, just as in voting. Many other points of interest are discussed in this interesting report with which it would be well that all should become acquainted.

Not a few of our citizens complain that a crowd gathers at a certain prominent corner on Main street, especially on Sunday evenings—no doubt against the wishes of the proprietor—who make it their business frequently to insult passers by with rude, profane, not unmixed with obscene language There is no objection by anybody to gentlemen standing at public corners, provided they annoy nobody who is quietly passing. If this thing is not reformed it will be well for the marshal to give the transgressors a hint

An indignant citizen thus ventilates himself on the subject

WANTED—A ten pounder well loaded to blow these chaps (he gives them hard names) off from Richheimer's corner on Sunday evenings, till decent people can get past, going to and returning from church, without being insulted. YORK.

According to previous notice the school election for director to fill the place of S C Bowman, Esq., was held at the old Union School house. The stormy condition of the weather probably prevented some from attending, yet a considerable number were present. R H Folger, Esq, was chosen president. As we understand it the order of proceedings was reversed—the election for director took place before the reading of the report, instead of afterward, as has been the custom Mr. James H Justus was a candidate for the place, and we understand that Kent Jarvis, Esq, was also named for the position but his claims were not presented The formality of taking a vote by ballot was dispensed with, and on motion Mr Justus was elected by acclamation That business done a considerable number left the house The reading of the annual report by I K Russell, Esq, was the next business in order. Financial matters were given in detail The largest expenses attended the erection and furnishing the fine new school building in West Massillon, which in all amounted to some $30,000. We expect to be furnished with a copy of this report for next week.

Mr Justus, the gentleman elected to fill the place of Mr. Bowman, is an energetic man, and we understand was what is called the reform candidate. In what the reform consists we are not advised, but hope it will be of such measures as will tend to make our schools more efficient, if possible, than they have been; though none of our people, that we are aware, complain that the schools have failed to meet the expectations of the community. All the people want in this respect, is competent, good men to manage our school affairs, and to do this properly is no sinecure—it is a task full of responsibility; and we trust the board of directors will meet the wishes of the friends of education the coming year.

In consequence of the glorious warm showers which fell on Sunday and Monday the farmers report the wheat as looking most promising. It has suffered a long, cold winter, with but little snow for protection and less rain to make it liable to freeze out. Although the growing season is late in coming it looks as if vegetation will not be behind much, for the warm sun will make everything grow rapidly. But the rains and thawing of the ground make the roads heavy which won't continue long.

As we suggested weeks ago business here is in a healthy condition, as will be seen by the increased columns of advertisements in his paper. We shall try to accommodate all who come.

Coe, Wetherill & Co., of Philadelphia, the enterprising advertising agents of that city, have recently commenced the publication of the American Journalist. It is very tastefully and neatly made up, and many of its pages well filled with matter of great interest to to the printing fraternity.

Our neighbors, the Browns of the Alliance Monitor, have lately procured a new title or head to the paper, which is a decided improvement in its appearance.

Bro. Gillespie, of the Alliance Local, has sold off his printing material, to go to Salineville, Columbiana county, and he has purchased entirely new material, so the paper is going to come out shiney. Presume he won't use the Chicago epidermis hereafter.

E D. McClymonds has returned to Massillon and opened an office for the practice of law.

The rooms of the Y M C A have just been ornamented with a handsome sign in front, which is a credit alike to the artist and the taste of the association. It indicates that the institution is prospering. The hint of a free reading room is one which hundreds of young men might profitably heed.

Kid Gloves—The best dollar kids in the city at Ricks'.

The Massillon Driving Park Association, although it has been quiet for some time in a public way, yet the members have been at work, preparing the premises for occupancy when the proper season arrives. It may require some weeks before all the needed improvements are perfected, but the committee having the business in charge consists of energetic men who believe in pushing things, and they won't waste much time in a heedless way. This association once having the ground prepared for the purpose of exhibiting horses at such times as may be convenient to all interested, is expected to occupy the same for their benefit. But as these occasions may not occur very frequently there will be ample opportunity for the people of our city to introduce fairs of various discriptions, such as are becoming quite common with many other smaller places all over the country. Beside the annual fairs of Summit county there are village or township fairs, at which farmers, mechanics manufacturers and many others come together and spend a pleasant day or two in exhibitions of improvements and industries, thus stimulating a laudable emulation among all interested to excel. Our Orrville neighbors have established their fair so permanently as to make it a noted institution for all the country round. Many other cases may be cited, but these are enough to show that such enterprises can be made a success. Now Massillon, with a population of not less than 6000, surrounded by a wealthy, intelligent community, and having the advantages in a short time of three railroads, should be up to the times, at least as far advanced as places with less than half the population and but a fraction of its wealth. Fairs can be got up here which will be a credit to the place, for our farmers and manufacturers are equal to the same classes elsewhere in the productions of husbandry and skill. Much taste is also manifested by the ladies in this place in floriculture, and and such a department at fairs could be vastly enriched by contributions from many a household in the city The truth is, we have all the elements here to get up such exhibitions as will not only be a credit to the place, but a cause of just pride to all interested. In alluding to the new fair grounds we have thought it not amiss to make these suggestions, and if any of our citizens feel like ventilating themselves on the subject we should be pleased to have an expression of their sentiments for publication.

Russells' establishment is in full and active operation, as the season for the sale of agricultural implements is approaching But the building of railroad cars is coming to be quite a large item at that establishment, as they can get as many orders as they wish. Indeed the demand for transportation cars and flats is unusual, as many roads are in need of them. The Russell firm, we are informed, can turn out two cars a day, with the strong force they have on hand. So there is no lack of work going on at these large and enterprising works.

It is within but very few days that farmers, and only a portion of them, have begun to plow. The ground was too much frozen until the moderate weather thawed it loose, and it is not all melted yet if reports are correct. Sunday's warm atmosphere, which reached to about 65 or 70 degrees with the rain which fell, did considerable toward unlocking the icy fetters with which nature has so long been bound. When the warm season fully sets in we may expect vegetation to grow with a rush The long dry winter has been a hard one on many farmers, because they have to feed their stock much longer than usual.

Mr. Nail was elected constable at Mansfield the other day, so it may be expected that he will clinch transgressers as the law directs. Here we have a Raser in the same position, and he goes for the sinners pretty sharp.

If we can get rid of the cold weather—and we may at "some future day hereafter," as Sam used to say—it will be in order to have a few more of those nice awnings put up. Mr. Mateer has a good thing in that way, and will probably attend to calls in that line,

While one glass lamp explodes, or burns to death somebody, there are a dozen glass tumblers tumbling as many victims in their graves. Yet a great fuss is made over the blowing up of a lamp, but nobody hardly notices the other dozen deaths.

As Mr. Williams is still unable to preach Rev. D. C. Blood filled the pulpit of the Presbyterian church of this place on last Sunday.

Thus far (Monday 8th) the thaw progresses steadily; the water plugs are not all open. But we hope they soon will be.

Monday evening we had a fine rain, a visitor which was welcomed by everybody. The air was warm, summer like—just the right condition to thaw out frozen nature and start vegetation to growing rapidly. A few such showers will be of incalculable advantage.

McClelland & Co, Dispatch building, 67 and 69, 5th avenue, Pittsburgh, are our sole agents and from them only can we receive advertisements from that city.—tf

We are pleased to note that H. K. Dickey & Co., wholesale dealers in groceries, spices, drugs, &c., who have heretofore traded in liquors also, have resolved to leave out the last named material. It is a good move for them. Mr. D, the senior member of the firm, has long been a successful wholesale dealer, and now with Mr. Webb in the firm their business will be active, and continued prosperity will favor them.

From all the indications with which we are favored the active town of Wilmot must be prospering in business this spring. Merchants, mechanics and manufacturers there are wide awake men. They are about to build a new school-house, an unmistakable proof of advancement.

An article appears on the first page, Dissertation on pain, by Sue Chestnutwood, of New Jersey, formerly a citizen of this place and member of one of the leading families here. Many of our citizens will read it with interest, as it indicates a degree of progress somewhat characteristic of the time.

By notice in its appropriate place our readers will see that a new drug store has just been opened, in the Opera building, in the third room from the south end. Our people always welcome business men who come among us, and are pleased to see them choose Massillon for a location.

Mr. S Oberlin has just left for the east in order to invest in a stock of new goods—the substantial class that he deals in.

Mr. H. Dielhenn, of the firm of P. & H. Dielhenn, will soon be off the way eastward for the purpose of replenishing his stock of clothing. This new establishment is doing a good business.

The Volcano Furnace has ceased operations for a short time to make needed repairs—after which we expect it will be actively at work as ever.

The voices of the frogs have been heard in this part of the land—that is, the little ones of that tribe which sing in about one syllable. They may have to look through glass yet before their concerts fully open.

Collars, in lace, pure thread, linnen also cuffs and full line of trimed handkerchiefs at Estep's.

A full line of kid gloves, in one and two buttons at McLain, Dangler & Co's.

Spring and summer shawls in all styles, colors and prices, just opened at Ricks'.

A. Ryder & Son have now one of the most eligible rooms in the city for business, being in a central location, on the principal streets where the mass of our population passes daily, often several times a day.

Mr. Taylor the enterprising proprietor of the Massillon steam mill, was induced to try an improved appliance in the shape of steam boilers; but the power which this contrivance produced was not adequate to the required wants of the establishment, so two good sized boilers, of the ordinary construction have been put in place, and now there is ample force to run all the machinery, consisting of five runs of stones, each with its necessary conveying, elevating and bolting apparatus. Between 200 and 300 barrels of flour are to be turned out daily.

Charles W. Greene, secretary of the Agricultural congress, gives notice that the next meeting of this body will hold its third session at St Louis, commencing Monday, May 27. The meeting is under the auspices of the St Louis fair Association, and all agricultural and horticultural societies are entitled to representation.

DIED—On the 3d inst, Mrs Frances Richheimer, wife of M. Richheimer, aged a little more than 48 years—of this city.

The Sore Throat of Consumptives—The hoarseness and sore throat peculiar to some kinds of consumption is one thing, while that incident to a slight cold or obstruction is another; the first named is for the most part dangerous, and is the product of a wide spread and fearful disease; whilst the latter being merely an obstruction, can be removed by a few doses of deobstruent properties One need hardly be taken for the other, as a great constitutional disturbance in that of a consumptive person will readily distinguish them. It would be part of wisdom, however to treat them both when they are first perceptible, as a great deal is gained by taking the vantage ground in all such cases Dr. Keyser's great lung cure will remove in a day or two the simple form of disease, whilst the severer malady will take weeks or months before it can be eradicated and a healthy condition established. Dr. Keyser's treatise, which will be sent free of cost, wherever it is wanted will explain more fully the method of action of the medicine. Price $1,50 per bottle, or 4 bottles for $5. If your druggist does not keep it, order it from Dr. K direct. Office for lung examination, 467 Liberty street, Pittsburgh, from 10 a m until 1 p m and from 3 until 6 p m., and on Saturday night until 9 o'clock.

Holloway's Pills and Ointment.—For scurvy leprosy, and cutaneous disease they are unrivalled. In places where these maladies are prevalent, the cures are marvellous, for the expulsion of pimples, blotches, &c., they are unparalled, and as a cosmetic the ointment stands unequalled. Sold every where. 25 cents per box or pot.

A Sad Falling Out.—It is indeed a sad falling out when, after years of the closest intimacy, the hair parts company with the head. Fortunately the lamentable separation may be easily prevented and the twain more closely united than ever by a timely and systematic use of Lyon's Kathairon, the most potent invigorant of the hair and promoter of its growth and beauty known to modern pharmacy. It completely obviates the dry and parched condition of the roots of the hair, which is preliminary to its coming out, by supplying the precise degree of moisture requisite to its preservation in a healthy state. It is the only true dissolvant and evaporant of dandruff and impurities of the scalp, whose presence is injurious to the hair. As a beautifier of the head the Kathairon has no equal. It not only increases the quantity of the hair, but improves its quality immediately, imparting a lustrous appearance and silky texture which are exceedingly attractive.

CAUTION.—Every genuine box of Dr. McLaine's Liver Pills bears the signature of Flemming Bro's, Pittsburgh Pa, and their private United States Stamp. ☞ Take no other. The market is full of imitations 457-6m

Dead men tell no tales. If they did, [illegible] the [illegible] drastic purge, and the terrible salivants of the materia medica, would arise from every graveyard. The motto of modern medical science is Preserve and regulate, not destroy, and no remedy of our day is so entirely in harmony with this philanthropic logic as Dr. Walker's Vegetable Vinegar Bitters. In this powerful, yet harmless restorative, dyspepsia, bilious complaints, and all diseases of the liver, stomach, bowels and nerves, encounter an irresistable antidote. 4w

Popular.—It is asserted, and correctly so, that Dr. Henry's Root and plant pills are the most favorite pill in family use. See advertisement. 4t

The True Grounds of Confidence.

Whence comes that firm reliance, that absolute, undoubting faith in the efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach bitters as a remedy for indigestion, bilious disorders, intermittent and remittent fevers, which notoriously prevail in all parts of the United States? This confidence has been growing for twenty years, and is still extending. It is not the result of credulity; it has not been engendered by any human device, but is the spontaneous and natural consequence of experience. What people see daily going on under their own eyes they cannot question. When families in unhealthy districts that resort to this wholesome vegetable tonic, as a preventive, escape periodical fevers, and their immediate neighbors, who neglect this precaution, are prostrated by the disease, how is it possible that the phenomenon should be without its lesson? In like manner when it is seen that obstinate cases of dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, nervous weakness and of general debility, yield to the operation of the famous remedy, how can even incredulity itself withhold its endorsement? Eye witnesses of the salutary effects of the Bitters are to be found in every civilized settlement on this continent. The thousands upon thousands who owe their restoration to health and strength, or their preservation from sickness, to its extraordinary medicinal properties, are enthusiastic in its praise The multitudes who recommend it in a neighborly way to their friends and acquaintances, as well as those who make public their estimate of its virtues, are always ready to state their reasons for the faith that is in them. They have all either felt or witnessed its benificent operations.

MUSIC AND MORALS.

We cannot deny to Italy the gift of sweet and enchanting melody. Rossini has also shown himself a master of the very limited effects of harmony which it suited his purpose to cultivate. Then why is not Rossini as good as Beethoven? Absurd as the question sounds to a musician, it is not an unreasonable one when coming from the general public, and the only answer we can find is this: Not to mention the enormous resources in the study and cultivation of harmony which the Italians from want of inclination or ability, neglect, the German music is higher than the Italian because it is a truer expression, and a more disciplined expression of the emotions. To follow a movement of Beethoven is, in the first place, a bracing exercise of the intellect. The emotions evoked, while assuming a double degree of importance by association with the analytic faculty, do not become enervated, because in the masterful grip of the great composer we are conducted through a cycle of naturally progressive feeling, which always ends by leaving the mind recreated, balanced and enobled by the exercise. In Beethoven all is restrained, nothing morbid which is not almost instantly corrected, nothing luxurious which is not finally raised to the clear atmosphere of wholesome and brisk activity, or some corrective mood of peaceful self mastery, or even playfulness. And the emotions thus roused are not of the vamped up feelings of a jaded appetite, or the false, inconsequent spasms of the sentimentalist. They are such as we have experienced in high moods or passionately sad ones, or in the night, in summer time, or by the sea; at all events they are unfolded before us, not with the want of perspective, or violent frenzy of a bad dream, but with true gradations in natural succession, and tempered with all the middle tints that go to make up the truth of life. Hence the different nature of the emotional exercise gone through in listening to typical German and typical Italian music. The Italian makes us sentimentalize, the German makes us feel. The sentiment of the one gives the emotional conception of artificial suffering or joy, the natural feeling of the other gives us the emotional conception which belongs to real suffering or joy. The one is stagey—smells of the oil and the rouge pot—the other is real, earnest, natural, and reproduces with irresistable force the deepest emotional experiences of our lives. It is not good to be constantly dissolved in a state of love melancholy, full of the language of passion without its real spirit—but that is what Italian music aims at. Again, the violent crises of emotion should come in their right places—like spots of primary color with wastes of gray between them. There are no middle tints in Italian music; the listeners are subjected to shock after shock of emotion—half a dozen smashing surprises, and twenty or thirty spasms and langnors in each scene, until at last we become like children who thrust their hands again and again into water charged with electricity, just on purpose to feel the thrill and the relapse. But that is not healthy emotion—it does not recreate the feelings; it kindles artificial feelings, and makes reality tasteless.

Now whenever feeling is not disciplined, it becomes weak, diseased, and unnatural. It is because German music takes emotion fairly in hand, disciplines it, expresses its depressions in order to remove them, renders with terrible accuracy, even its insanity and incoherence in order to give relief through such expression, and restore calm, flinches not from the tender and the passionate, stoops to pity, and becomes a very angel in sorrow; it is because German music has probed the humanities and sounded the depths of our nature—taught us how to bring the emotional region not only into the highest activity, but also under the highest control—that we place German music in the front rank, and allow no names to stand before Gluck, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Spohr, Mendelssohn, and Schumann.—Harper's Magazine for April.

No man does his best except when he is cheerful. A light heart maketh nimble hands and keepeth the mind free and alert.

A good sort of a man was recently asked to subscribe for a chandelier for the church. 'Now,' said he, 'what's the use of a chandelier? after you get it you can't find any one to play on it.'

Few women are so modest that they are unwilling to sit in the lap of luxury.

A sea captain explained to an inquisitive lady that they used shrouds aboard ship to bury dead calms at sea.

A boarding house keeper mixed some patent medicine with his hash because it was advertised as a cure for consumption.

A Wisconsin man reported that he couldn't find a word in his dictionary because the blasted book hadn't got an index.

'An indiscreet man confided a secret to another, and begged him not to repeat it. 'It's all right,' was the reply 'I will be as close as you were.'

A minister, not long ago, preached from the text: 'Be ye therefore steadfast;' but the printer made him expound from 'Be ye there for breakfast.'

THE IMPROVED AMERICAN:

Button-Hole, Overseaming,

—AND—

Complete Sewing Machine.

The first and only Button-hole and Sewing machine combined that has made its advent in this or any other country.

☞The following reasons are given why this is the best

Family Machine to Purchase

1. Because it will do everything that any machine can do, sewing from the finest to the coarsest material, hemming, felling, corading, braiding, binding, gathering and sewing on at the same time, ruffling, quilting, &c., better than any other machine.
2. Because the tensions are more easily adjusted than any other machine.
3. Because it can make a beautiful button hole, making as fine a pearl as by hand.
4. Because it will embroider over the edge, making a neat and beautiful border on any garment.
5. Because it will make a beautiful eyelet hole
6. Because it can do overhand seaming, by which sheets, pillow cases, and the like are sewed over and over.
7. Because you can quickly raise or lower the feed to adapt it to thick or thin cloth.
8. Because you have a short deep bobbin by which the thread is constantly drawn from the center; the tension is consequently even and does not break the thread.
9. Because the presser foot turns back; that the cloth can be easily removed after being sewed.
10. Because the best mechanics pronounce it the best finished and made on the best principle of any machine manufactured.
11. Because it has a better shuttle than any other machine.
12. Because it runs easier and quieter than any other heavy machine.
13. Because it is two machines in one—a button hole working and sewing machine combined.

It is to last a lifetime, and therefore one is wanted that will do the most work, and do it the best, and this machine can do several kinds of sewing not done on any other machine, besides doing every kind that all others can do.

The American or Plain Sewing Machine

Is a beautiful family and light manufacturing machine, possessing all the superior qualities of the combined machine, except making button holes and overseaming. In all other respects the principal of construction is the same.

These Machines are Warranted.
